

Costa Rica Terrazu

Costa Rica lies between the Caribbean and the Pacific Ocean, in Central America. The Terrazu region, southwest of San Jose, hosts many of the country's more than 1,200 identified species of orchids and brilliant tropical birds. The humid mid-elevation environments are called cloud forests.

An arabica variety, Terrazu is grown in rich volcanic soil at elevations between 1200 and 1700 meters. It is full-bodied and fragrant, regarded as one of the world's finest coffees.
